SCARS OF GRIEF

SCARS OF GRIEF

I should not like to pass away
And stand before my God and asy:

I have not shared another's woe.

I have not feit a bitter bigw
I know not what it is to fail—
To stang where doubts and fears assail,
And still be true. I have not kept
My yows against great odds, nor wept in sorrow's hours. From hirth to now
No line of care has seared my brow.

I know not what it is to fight
For any principle of right
I to never stood where death is night
And in these moments questioned why
The soul I leved must needs depart
For faith I have not searched my heart
And found therein the strength to hear
The sche and, anguish ledging there
I stand before the great white throne
Unicated and my worth unknown

When it shall rome my time to go I want to stand with them who knew inst what it means to live and hear Life's common round of grief and rara, I want to near that I have went and still my faith in God have kept. Stood firm, when storms of doubt hegan, and tried my heat to play the man. When I shall pean beyond the stars My soul man glory in its scars. (Copyright, 1919, by Edgar A Guest)
